
INSTRUCTIONS

The U.S. Department of Education requires students to provide parent information if the student answered “No” to all Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) dependency questions. Dependency status may be reviewed if a student can document extenuating circumstances. Examples of extenuating circumstances include parent abandonment, an abusive family environment that threatens the student’s health or safety, or inability to locate their parents.

Dependency status appeals are reviewed on a case-by-case basis based on individual circumstances. Appeal approval does not guarantee additional federal aid eligibility. The student is responsible for all outstanding bills with Zane State College. If your dependency status appeal is approved, your dependency status must be reevaluated each year until you are meeting the federal independent student criteria.

Allow 2 to 3 weeks for processing time once all necessary documents have been received. You will receive notification of the results by email to your Zane State College email account. Failure to provide the required documentation will delay processing of the application.

Appeal Requirements

 3. Contact information for each individual must be a part of the letter.
